When children begin their schooling, their lives continue to be marked by rapid development. We called these the vital years (age 4 to 12 years). What a child eats, drink and do during these vital years contributes to their overall body growth and cognitive development. In summary, whatever happens during their vital years have a lasting impact on their lives such as academic success, body physique and health status.

Many parents are more concerned about their children's dietary welfare than their own. Thus, it is a daily struggle for parents to figure out whether they doing enough for their children? It can be a guessing game whether your children are achieving their daily recommended nutritional intake such as for energy, protein, vitamins, minerals, etc. Additionally, a child may need extra nutrients for their immunity, brain development, eyesight, etc.

How can a parent be sure their children are getting enough? An easier solution is to use nutraceutical supplements. While nutraceutical supplements should never be considered a replacement for a balanced diet, they do offer parents the reassurance of supporting their children with nutrients to ensure they are getting everything they need daily.

We may have the solution for all parents.
